Opp Grocery Owner Killed Monday Morning

Covington County Sheriff's deputies report that their department has no leads at this time in the shooting death of Rex Carney, a 43-year-old merchant whose body was discovered Monday by a customer at his grocery store on U.S. 84.

Carney was found lying in a pool of blood about 6 a.m. when a customer came into his store. In a manner reminiscent of the recent shooting of James L. (Junior) Counts, the victim had several gunshot wounds to the head and there was evidence that a robbery had taken place.

A small caliber weapon is believed to have been used in the murder. Information about the direction from which the victim was shot is not being released by authorities at this time.

An autopsy is being conducted on the victim, who resided about two miles from town. Findings will be made known in a week to 60 days, according to Sheriff's deputies.

It has not been determined whether Carney was killed during the night or if the shooting occurred when he opened his store Monday morning.

An around-the-clock investigation is continuing in the case, but so far there have been no leads discovered in the case, deputies said.

KNIVES AND SUCH

Recently I had lunch with Wayne and Tossie Henderson, former residents of Valley in Elizabethtown. They are graduates of the Clear Creek Baptist School in Pineville.

Clear Creek is a Bible School which specializes in training adults who have entered full-time Christian service. In fact, that is all Clear Creek does. Over 100 alumni have completed the course of study offered by the theological school begun by Dr. L. C. Kelley in 1926.

Wayne has a hobby which won my admiration immediately. That is, making high-quality knives. Most of his handcrafted instruments would be very expensive if they were sold commercially, but since making them is a hobby that Wayne enjoys, he refuses to sell any of them.

Because of the interest which has developed within the past few years here in the mountains around handicrafts, articles such as knives, home-made quilts and pottery, have regained a lot of response.

Years ago Berea College initiated a program to revive handicrafts. Interest in the subject developed slowly, but now these items can be seen in many parts of the world.

The Pastor's Corner

Most people could readily point out the individuals who have had unusual influence on their lives across the years. Children have their hero figures, young people have their philosophical pace setters, and adults have their ideals who seem to have achieved.

Perhaps the question that needs to be asked is, "What kind of influence do I have?" If others have influenced your life in a negative way, then you have a responsibility to avoid that same kind of influence on someone else; and if someone has made a positive contribution to your life, then your responsibility is to pass that positive value on to someone else. It just might be that you have come to this particular point in your life where you can cast a shadow over the lives of others, and to a large degree, you can determine what kind of shadow it is going to be.

In a multi-faceted society, men and women must not lose sight of the influence and responsibility of individuals. In a real sense, all men are responsible for the influence he or she has upon others.

"Who knows but that you have come to the Kingdom for such a time as this?"

"You are not born for fame if you do not know the value of time." - Vauvenargues

Understanding Yourself

Helpful Ideas From The International Lutheran Laymen's League

THE ART OF LISTENING

People are so often preoccupied with themselves that they forget to look outside themselves.

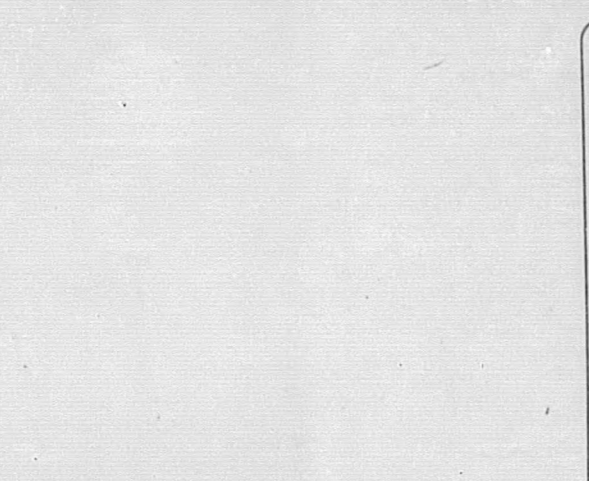

But there is a beauty and meaning in the ordinary things of the world waiting right out there for attentive ears and open eyes.

For the most part, God Himself speaks to us in ordinary ways, in the ordinary events of life, in the still small voice, while people wait for the dramatic occurrence they are always demanding, but won't listen to when it comes.

God's still small voice to our world is Jesus Christ. In His own unpretentious way, the Son of God gave His life for us all. In Christ, God was reconciling the world to Himself, not counting our sins against us. He is God's still small voice in history, not the drowned-out by the whirl of industry, the roll of drums, the thunders of war, the pronouncements of the mighty, or the jabbering of people preoccupied with themselves.

Timber Contracts Should Be Precise

BY: WAYNE ROBERTS, Coffee County Forester

First and foremost, no contract is worth the paper it is written on, unless both parties enter into it truthfully and with the intentions to fulfill the contract fully.

Listed below are some things which should be included in the contract:

1. The names and addresses of both parties.
2. The date and place the contract is signed.
3. Guarantee of the ownership of the timber, who pays the taxes or other fixed charges, permission for the logger to enter and leave the property during the time of the contract.
4. Locations and legal descriptions of the property.
5. Descriptions of timber to be sold. What trees are included in the sale and the system of marking to be used; also who is to do the marking.
6. Conditions of payment whether it is cash sum, down payment or installments, by the cord or thousand or piece, if it is crosscut or posts.
7. Cutting rules and regulations, including the beginning and expiration dates of cutting.
8. The disposition of the logs or other products.
9. The liability for fire or property damage.
10. Locations of logging roads.
11. Penalty clause for mis-cutting.
12. Specific identification of areas you wish to reserve.
13. Provision whereby the purchaser will protect and hold the seller harmless from any liability.
14. Requirement that all fences and roads be kept in repair. Gates to be closed, know what roads are to be used, make sure tops are removed from fields and pastures.
15. Expiration date for removal of all equipment and timber.
16. Any performance bond or at least a guarantee of compliance.

BORERS

I see a lot of peach and apple trees that are heavily infested with the peach tree borer. This worm is sometimes very difficult to control. The borer is probably the main reason peach trees weaken and die after two or three years. Evidence of borer damage is a jelly-like substance near the base of the trees and some of the lower limbs.

Two treatments of Thiodan should be used about two weeks apart in August and early September. Follow the directions on the container in making the application. The farm supply stores either have this material on hand or can get it for you. If you want to control the peach tree borer, it is absolutely necessary to put on at least two treatments. If you have questions, call me at 874-5596.

INSECT CONTROL

Some of the better worm control insecticides for peaches may become in short supply in the days ahead. In fact, in many cases, shortages already exist. Coffee County farmers are intensely interested in protecting this peach crop the rest of the year. Dr. John French, our insect specialist at Auburn, told me that a heavy infestation is expected the last two weeks of August. He also pointed out that materials we do not ordinarily recommend may need to be used to control worms. Some of these materials are Toxaphene at the rate of 2 pounds per acre plus 1 pound of Sevin. Another combination is 2 pounds Toxaphene plus 1 pound Malathion.

We may have to go to some less desirable materials to keep worms down as much as possible. No doubt about it - the next two weeks are going to be critical in controlling these insects.

COASTAL BEREMUDA

Dairymen and beef cattle producers who are grazing Coastal Bermuda or saving it for hay have a real problem in controlling worms. Many of the materials we recommend for the control of worms in pastures are not clear-cut neighbors on grass. Where worms are a problem we recommend Dioxin at the rate of 1 pound per acre sprayed on pastures. Dioxin comes in 80% wettable powder or 50% wettable powder. If you use the 80%, you would need to use about 1-1/4 pounds of the material. If you use the 50%, you would need to use 2 pounds of the material.

THE PAST 20 years I have seen more rattlesnakes in August and early September than in any other month of the year. I saw a large one the other day on the Elba-Samson Highway about 3 miles south of Elba. There is something about the time of the year when the rattlesnakes are most numerous. They are very active and are much more visible this time of the year.

Be extremely careful around lumber piles, old rock beds, in peanut fields and other areas where weeds are abundant. Be careful in the clean places around your house, too. The rattlesnake is a neighbor of mine had a rattlesnake crawl right in the back yard of mine last night. It would be mighty wise to take a flashlight with you. Even though your yard and driveway might be as clean as a whistle, a snake could be out there.

ARMYWORM INJURY

Armyworm injury is usually not noticed on lawns and turf-grasses until extremely heavy populations occur, as is the case at present. The newly hatched larvae are unable to bite out pieces of grass, but only scrape away grass cells from one side of the grass blade leaving a colorless, membranous area at the tip of the grass blade. As the caterpillars become larger, they chew the grasses. Heavy populations may completely clean all emerging grass blades back to the soil. 1/2 lb. To check lawns or turf-grasses for armyworm damage, 1-1/2 lb. of.

Worm Population Is Increasing In County

BY: DAN PRESLEY

Unusually heavy populations of armyworms (primarily the fall armyworm) are occurring throughout Coffee County as a result of heavy armyworm moth egg laying that began approximately 2 weeks earlier. Well cared for, highly fertilized grasses are more heavily attacked than grasses with low fertility. Armyworm moths seek out grasses with a high level of nitrogen to lay their eggs on.

Appearance of the fall armyworm in these numbers is 2 to 3 weeks earlier than usual. The moths lay 1,000 pinkish-white eggs in clumps of 100-150 and are generally somewhat more prolific than true armyworms which lay a total of around 500 greenish-white eggs. Fall armyworms resemble the true armyworms but differ greatly in their feeding habits in that the true armyworm is pretty much limited to grass foliage, while fall armyworms will feed on just anything available. We have seen them on corn, sorghum, and now on the later part of September.

Most of the fall armyworms are light brown moths with a wingspread of about 1 1/2 inches. The caterpillars are approximately 1 1/2 inches long when mature. When first hatched, fall armyworm larvae are grayish-green with a stripe along their sides. When approaching maturity, they are pale brown to black with large stripes along their sides. On the front of their bodies, a yellow inverted "Y" marking. The length of the life cycle is about 6 to 6 1/2 weeks. The eggs are laid at night and hatch in about 5 days. The larvae are especially active at night. These are full-grown in about 20 days, and then enter the soil to change into pupae. The inactive pupal stage lasts about 10 days. After the moth emerges, worms feed from the pupal cases, they usually migrate northward and often fly many miles before the sex and inspected regularly females lay eggs. The fall armyworm may have as many from now through September as six generations a year in the Gulf states, but does not survive the winter farther north.

Armyworm injury is usually not noticed on lawns and turf-grasses until extremely heavy populations occur, as is the case at present. The newly hatched larvae are unable to bite out pieces of grass, but only scrape away grass cells from one side of the grass blade leaving a colorless, membranous area at the tip of the grass blade. WOODLAND PLANTING

Site preparation is important before planting trees. The reason for site preparation is to improve survival of the seedlings. December through February are the best months to plant seedlings in this area. Most of the best woodland managers are windowing the debris on the contour to help hold the soil until the trees drop a layer of protective seedlings. They are chopping the area real well and using dozers and a roughland planter.

In extremely eroded conditions, it would be difficult to disturb the soil. Just plant these areas by hand and spray to control hardwood competition.

In excessively wet areas a ripper-hipper-beder is used to lift the seedling above a high water table. Planted in a hipped up bed the seedling can obtain oxygen and nutrients necessary to grow. This method is a little more expensive but the seedling survival is much greater and could save the expense of replanting. Call your local SCS office for assistance in woodland planting and management.

NEW BROCKTON GULLY STABILIZATION COMPLETED

The New Brockton Post Office gully, well-known for its danger to drivers and pedestrians in the city, has recently been put to rest. The Soil Conservation Service, through an Emergency Watershed Fund shaped, flumed, seeded and mulched the giant gully, leaving the area attractive and safe to everyone.

The SCS personnel came to the site last winter, surveyed and designed the structure. Wayne Ford Construction Company from Dothan received the contract and began work in June. The site is now bursting with new growth of grass. The gully was threatening the street above it and new curbing and flume will keep the gully from occurring again.

Murphy Pleased With Gamecocks

"I'm real pleased! The boys are putting forth a lot of effort and things are looking pretty good."

Those were the words of New Brighton Football Coach Jim Murphy when asked about the Gamecocks' pre-season drills.

"We have 30 boys out for football," said Coach Murphy in a recent telephone conversation. "And most of them went out for spring training."

"So far, we have worked primarily on basic fundamentals," said Murphy, "but we plan on doing a great deal of work on all parts of the game in the coming weeks."

Murphy reported the Gamecocks had "average size for a quickness."

"The boys are getting after each other real well," said the Gamecock mentor, "and everyone has done what we've asked."

"Our best weapon should be our quickness," added Murphy, "while our weakness could be our lack of depth. However, if our first string players stay healthy, we'll be okay."

In closing, Coach Murphy picked Wicksburg as the team to beat in the area.

Murphy is assisted by Coach Leary Bowtell, a former football standout at Elba High School.

Rains Dampen Practice At Zion Chapel

The recent outbreak of afternoon rains continues to play havoc with football practice at Zion Chapel as the Rebels work toward their season opener against Louisville on September 2.

"We're just struggling along," said Rebel Coach John Sanders in a recent interview.

"It's been raining a lot up here and we've only been able to practice outside about 5 times."

Coach Sanders reported only 25 boys are out for football, a drop from the number of players in recent years.

"We took a lot better than we did this time last year," said Sanders, "mainly because we have a little experience."

However, we do have a young team and only have four players with actual proven game experience."

Coach Sanders added the team will be bigger and stronger this year due to an off-season weight program, but again said, "We will be mighty young."

Continuing, Sanders reported, "The players' attitudes are real good. As a whole, their attitudes are the best of any team I've ever been associated with. Also, the seniors are providing excellent leadership."

When asked about last year's 0-10 record, Sanders replies, "I hope our kids will remember the way several teams ran up the score. We got roughed up last year, but I think the players will be ready to try and get 'em back this year."

Coach Sanders said the practices thus far have been devoted to fundamentals, because "you just can't get much done practicing in the gym."

Turning to the upcoming season, Sanders said, "We play a tough schedule. Any time you play folks like Clio, Houston Academy, Louisville and G. W. Long (Skipperville), you've got your hands full."

Those four teams had a combined record of 37 wins and 6 losses last year."

The teams in the region with the Rebels are Louisville, Clio, Long, Arlton and Clayton, and Sanders feels the team to beat is Clio.

"Overall," said Coach Sanders, "I'm a bigger, stronger, and I hope we're going to be a whole lot better."

T. T. Whitehead caught these Pine Level. They weighed a catfish at a private pond in whopping 35 3/4 pounds.

Jerry Parker holds his 30 lb. catfish at the county pond. There were 6 and they were caught on a Mack's Fire-tail worm.

Mike Farris caught these two bass at the county pond on a Bait B. The larger weighed 6 pounds, 5 ounces, and the little one weighed in at 2 pounds, 8 ounces.

The Elba Clipper

Mayor's Conflict With Council Again Centers Around Police Chief

The postponed meeting of the Elba City Council started off slowly, with the approval of the minutes of the last meeting, and Mayor Bob Folsom taking for several minutes about well point pumps. However, when a councilman interrupted a discussion and hearing the visitors who were present first, the action got very lively.

First, the council approved a request from the rescue squad for use of the storage building at the old National Guard Armory for rescue equipment.

Then Mayor Folsom recognized Mrs. J. J. Black and Black asked, "Why the chief (Elba Police Chief M. W. Johnston) went to the wood yard and talked to that 'nigger' that raped my daughter and didn't arrest him."

The discussion soon turned into a Folsom against everyone else debate. Folsom began to question Johnston with questions such as: "Were you at Danley Cross Roads?" "Were you at the police office?" "Who was the police officer?" "Is that the man who was on vacation and you called for him to come back here?" "Did he tell you people that he had knowledge of who it was?"

"Did you and him, as soon as he arrived in Elba get in a police car and go to the pallet mill?" Folsom then asked Johnston to tell him some more about it and Johnston said the two went out where the sheriff was holding the investigation and were asked to assist the sheriff and we did. We checked about eleven people that morning. We had no idea this man was guilty of the rape until afterwards or until about 11:15 when the sheriff produced some information that indicated that he might be one we wanted. Johnston said that on several occasions that he had been instructed by the District Attorney not to discuss any evidence in the case.

Folsom made a statement concerning some evidence in the case that the news media had been asked not to publish and Johnston reminded him it was confidential information, and Folsom again asked Johnston to confirm the evidence, but the chief again declined, saying the District Attorney had issued him instruction not to discuss the case with anyone. That particular bit of information actually would have strengthened Johnston's position with Folsom, and it is unclear to observers why Folsom brought it up in the accusing way it was.

Folsom said he had talked with the city attorney and was told the officers should have brought the man in or held him until the sheriff arrived. The city attorney was not present to confirm his statements, however, it was revealed later that Folsom then talked to the District Attorney Lewey Stephens and Circuit Judge Terry Butts and asked them the same question. Stephens also was not available for comments, but someone called Butts, who did attend the meeting "to clarify my answer to you (Folsom)."

Johnston told Folsom that under the law, he had no authority to pick the man up at that time. Folsom admitted that he had gotten that same advice from Judge Butts. Johnston said that if he had arrested all eleven people he talked to that morning, "the city would have been in the biggest lawsuit it ever saw."

The exchange continued with Folsom saying first that he had gotten that same advice from Judge Butts. Johnston said that if he had arrested all eleven people he talked to that morning, "the city would have been in the biggest lawsuit it ever saw."

After several attempts by Councilman Wayland Sharpless to get the mayor to give a recommendation, and Folsom continued to say he would follow the wishes of the council. Councilman Jimmy Wise asked, "This came up two weeks ago, and why didn't you take any action then?" Folsom first said that there was no quorum for a meeting and when Wise pointed out that Folsom was the mayor and had certain powers that he didn't exercise, Folsom commented, "I took action here one time and I got low rated and persecuted. That I was persecuting the man and had it in for him, so I am laying it on top of the table for this mayor and council tonight." Folsom continued with, "We will all take a hard tonight."

Wise again asked Folsom why he was waiting the council to take the action when "Everyday you do things without consulting the council and things this council decides are not carried out." When Folsom said he had not discussed this with anyone, Wise said, "There is no need to say you haven't discussed this with other people, because I have people everyday tell me things when you have been talking."

Folsom acknowledged that a lot of people "tote tales" and a lot of people in Elba don't like Bob Folsom. The mayor again said, "You are not going to put the rabbit on my back again. Bob Folsom doesn't fall in the same trap twice."

After a thirty second pause when nothing was said, Councilman D. M. English asked the chief what the procedure was when you go to interview someone who is a suspect. Johnston said there was no such thing as interview a suspect anyone.

Johnston noted that the suspect did not have a beard, as was described, nor did he have a mustache as was given in the description.

Finally after more discussion, the council took a five minute break and then continued the discussion in the same grain. Folsom finally said, "Since it becomes my duty, something I regret to do, something I hate to do, I am going to recommend to this council that Chief Johnston be dismissed for improper handling of a felony case." Then Folsom asked, "What response do I hear, if any?"

Sharpless asked if it wouldn't be more appropriate for the mayor to take whatever action he desired, and then let the council act on that. Folsom said he had made a recommendation to the council, and it was in their hands. Folsom said the council could fire Johnston, suspend him, or let him go.

During a round and round discussion trying to clarify just what Folsom was recommending, Circuit Judge Terry Butts entered the meeting. Butts said he was called and asked to come and clarify what the mayor had asked earlier involving the case. Butts noted that he doubted there was anyone in the room who wouldn't be sympathetic to the Blacks or to what happened. Butts pointed out that to arrest, you must have probable cause, and that his understanding was that Johnston didn't have probable cause at that time. Butts also said, "He would not deny that Johnston was not only a scholar and a gentleman, but also a Christian. He can find a job anywhere he wants one, because he is by all admissions of anyone who has ever dealt with him in a position of authority, one of the finest law enforcement officials in this part of the country, and I would dare say in the state of Alabama."

Butts then responded to a statement by Folsom saying, "I don't think you, this council, me, Mr. and Mrs. Black or anyone has the right to try cases in the press or in this council. The place to try cases is in the courtroom."

When Butts noted that there were facts in the case not known to them, not involved in law enforcement that could not be brought out, Folsom stated that he knew less about the case than anyone. Butts then asked him, "Why he was disciplining the man for something he didn't know anything about?"

Folsom said unless the council disciplined the man, there would be nothing done, and then Wise said, "You're the mayor." Folsom said the case was finished, and they would move on to the next item of business. Folsom then presented the council with a lengthy story about an honor guard situation during the funeral of former Mayor L. P. Mullins. He reported that Assistant Chief Max Rayborn had refused to work the detail, and he asked the council to suspend him. The council noted again that any such action should be done by the mayor, and then the council would take its action. Several times Folsom said he was suspending Rayborn for thirty days without pay, only to change his mind and revoke the suspension each time. Finally he said that since the council would take no action, the matter was closed.

A discussion on a previous decision to file a lawsuit in the case of a mobile home in a R-I zone failed to clear up anything with Folsom's quote of the city attorney differing from that of Councilman Wise's. Folsom denied telling the attorney to proceed with the lawsuit. The matter was tabled.

The council voted to raise J. C. Stuckey's salary to that of superintendent, since he was acting as street superintendent. They also approved a 45¢ an hour raise for Grady Silas as assistant superintendent.

The council discussed the need for police cars, loose dogs, drainage and the coming 4¢ per household charge from the council for use of the garbage landfill. Also the council approved the release of a lease on the Brooks property, being used as a parking lot, if the estate repays the cost the city incurred in cleaning it up. This is to allow sale of the property for a business.
